Hi Jen,

I did move to Denver 6/1 and started a new position shortly after that has had me on the road quite a bit. I continue to own my property in Ann Arbor and it had been my plan to attend GAC meetings. I had to be in NYC last meeting during the strategy kick-off. I had hoped to call in, but learned that is against the open meetings rules. I'd be happy to discuss transitioning off of GAC as the real estate professional when appropriate.

Here is a formal statement that can be shared on my behalf at the 8/1 meeting. I'm sorry that I haven't had the opportunity to report in sooner- thanks Jen.

"Dear GAC,

Over the last two months I have transitioned out of living in Ann Arbor to work with Prologis, a global operator of industrial real estate, leading their solar development as a member of their Global Energy team.

Unfortunately, this has put my schedule in conflict with the timing of recent GAC meetings and the strategy sessions that I had hoped to be involved in. In respect to the commission and community, I would be happy to work through a transition of my seat as the Real Estate Professional to another community member who qualifies and will encourage my contacts to apply. In the meantime, it has been my intention to share commentary during the strategy sessions on the recent announcement by the State on the Farmland and Open Space Preservation Program that allows preserved, agricultural, land to be developed into solar arrays. This was a timely announcement by the state that I believe GAC will encounter and need to consider during the strategic planning process. I am happy to be a resource now and anytime in the future. Over the next few weeks, I will work with Jen and Remy to follow the correct process for facilitating a transition. It has been a pleasure serving the community with all of you- this work has been extremely meaningful to me. Thank you, Alex Perlman."

Hi Alex,

I met someone who used to work at Oxford this week and he mentioned that you'd moved to Denver this spring so I'm writing to confirm this?
