The Michigan Public Service Commission (Commission) will hold a public hearing to consider The Detroit Edison Company's (Edison) July 31, 2012 application to implement its proposed Advanced Metering Infrastructure (AMI) Opt-Out Program for its residential customers. Edison represents that its program will provide an opportunity for individual residential customers to voluntarily request to participate in its program to have a non-transmitting AMI meter installed at the Customer's residential service address instead of Edison's transmitting AMI meter. Edison's application represents that the electing customer will be subjected to an initial charge of $87 for costs of special infrastructure charges and the metering changes required at the site and a monthly fee of $15 to cover the incremental costs of manual meter reading infrastructure and other services. Edison also represents those customers who elect to participate in the AMI Opt-Out Program are giving up certain benefits attributed to the use of AMI at their service location.
