Anne Martin, 3412 Porter Rd, Ann Arbor, explained that she was lucky to purchase a house in Ann Arbor while she could afford it, and she explained that her home is part of her retirement plan, and expressed concern with the value of the property decreasing due to the development and the environmental and other impacts it could have.

Ethel Potts, 1014 Elder Blvd, Ann Arbor, stated that because a piece of land is vacant, that doesn't mean it is suitable for any type of development. She explained that the proposed plans do not have any relationship with existing natural features, that she has concerns about traffic, emergency access, and that the proposed project is not suitable for the proposed location.

Patricia Jessap, 3094 Lakewood, Ann Arbor, expressed opposition for the proposed project, and explained that the opinion and interpretation of City staff that the proposed project will not be detrimental to the surrounding property is incorrect. She explained that the proposed project would be detrimental to the people near by. She further explained that the development is not a good fit for the area.

Leslie Beemer, 143 Westover Street, Ann Arbor, expressed opposition for the project, explaining that noise pollution impacts the development of children, flooding issues in the neighborhood, conditions of roads in the area, Master Plan non-compliance, and quality of life impacts. Moved by Briggs, seconded by Weatherbee, that the Ann Arbor City Planning Commission hereby recommends that the Mayor and City Council approve Lockwood of Ann Arbor Planned Unit Development (PUD) Zoning District and Supplemental Regulations, PUD Site Plan, and Development Agreement.

COMMISSION DISCUSSION:

Commissioner Ackerman discussed the Gelman Plume asked questions regarding the Gelman Plume, the role of the City in managing it, infiltration, proposed plants to manage storm water, water quantity, quality, snow run off, salt entering the lakes, fire safety access, and additional noise at the site caused by deliveries. He explained that single family homes built on the project site would be not affordable, large, and also likely intrusive. He explained the need for affordable housing in Ann Arbor, and that the affordable housing offered by the proposed project is valuable to the community.

Gibb-Randall inquired about the depth of the plume in the area as well as the nearby rain garden.

Commissioner Briggs inquired about flooding in the area as well as the proposed plans in relation to EPA regulations as well as salt and snow impacts on the area. She also inquired about a hydrogeological study, and if it's required by other communities. She discussed that the benefits of the project outweigh the potential downsides, and that with adjustments to the development agreement, she would feel comfortable voting.

Commissioner Trudeau inquired about the level of stormwater review for a by-right project at the site. Trudeau also discussed the Master Plan as it relates to the proposed project, and that low intensity uses are considered by the Master Plan at the site. He explained that any single family home developed at the site will not be affordable, because brand new single homes are not cheap in Ann Arbor. He further explained that this is an opportunity to get more than the minimum amount of 15% affordable units, and that the developer is requesting 40% affordable units, which is a significant public benefit to the city. He also discussed the park contribution, and further that a claim that the project does not align with the Master Plan is not true. He requested more information salt and pesticide usage, and also considered placing additional dark sky or lighting conditions on the project.

Gibb-Randall provided information on City of Ann Arbor stormwater requirements.

Kowalski explained that if the area was developed by-right, stormwater detention would need to be provided, but it would be only planned for the surface that is known such as a road or driveways, and that the requirements are different for smaller developments. He further explained that an alternatives analysis are required by the City of Ann Arbor, and than analysis is referenced in staff review. Kowalski stated that the Fire Marshall has reviewed the plans and has approved them.

Commissioner Sauve inquired about the difference in impervious surface for the proposed development compared to to 12 to 22 single family homes at the site. She discussed the potential environmental impacts of different types of development at the site. She also discussed snowfall and snow removal, lighting at the site, and the importance and benefit of sidewalk connectivity. Suave added that her assessment of the site is that a fire truck could reach the site by access from Jackson road.

Commissioner Weatherbee inquired about the possibility of making specific recommendations to the developer about substances like fertilizer, salt, and similar items. She also inquired about the scope of the Gelman Plume. Weatherbee explained her experience with living in a neighborhood where many rental units were added, and she stressed the importance of thinking about renters as real people, and that not everyone can or wants to live in a single family home, and that housing is needed in Ann Arbor.

Commissioner Woods discussed the type of development, explained that although some aspects of the proposed development are commercial in nature, and that humans will live there. She expressed concern with salt usage, the potential pollution at the site, as well as traffic issues. Woods requested that a hydrogeological study be conducted.

Matt Naud, Environmental Coordinator at the City of Ann Arbor, discussed the plume as it relates to the proposed development. He explained that he does not have the depth data at this time, but the First Sister lake is not contaminated, and is testing at below one part per billion, and that the shallow contamination at the site is not getting into First Sister Lake. He also explained that yes, the City has a goal to infiltrate, but if contamination due to infiltration would occur, other management systems are pursued. He explained that he has not looked at the impacts of salt as part of his review, but the use of salt in the neighborhoods near the Sister Lakes has been reduced and at this time a mixture of sand and salt is used. He explained that more information on salt use can be provided. Naud explained that the City of Ann Arbor is progressive with banning and limiting potentially harmful substances from use, and that the City Attorney would have to be consulted if an agreement with a developer to not allow certain substances like salt or fertilizer. He explained that water from the rain garden moves directly into the lake. Naud explained that the Gelman Plume effects four to five thousand parcels. Naud explained that a hydrogeological study has not been completed and is not required, and costs one hundred thousand dollars.

Peter Stephens, Land Development Coordinator at the City of Ann Arbor, explained that the stormwater plans for this project were reviewed to the same standards that all other projects are, and that when possible he does typically recommend infiltration, and that based on the sand and clay data that exists it is his finding that infiltration at the site would not have a grand impact on the Gelman Plume. He explained that with the elevations at the site and the proposed water maintenance system, the same amount of water that enters the lake at this time would enter the lake if the proposed development exists. He explained that the water quality would be improved with the proposed system due to the filtration systems proposed. Stephens also explained that at the site at this time, there is no storm water detention due to being undeveloped, and that after development there would be a storm water detention system that would provide detention for a 100 year storm and provide infiltration, meaning that stormwater management in the area would be improved. He explained that he has not looked at the impacts of salt as part of his review.

Name unknown, Natural Area Preservation, added that he does not look at salt as part of his review.

Mark Cornic, Lockwood, explained that he met with a large snow removal company and received a recommendation to have the snow removed from the site instead of stored on the site, he explained that he is aware of the concern with snow and salt contaminating the site and that the developer is receptive to methods to mitigate that. He explained that due to people living in the proposed development, that an excess of noise would not exist, and that deliveries would take place twice a week during the late morning or early afternoon. He explained that he can inquire with delivery companies if they can determine a window.

Terry Clark, with the Petitioner, explained that several studies were completed before the proposed project was submitted, and that the project has evolved to address the requests of the community. He explained that the three landmark trees that are proposed to be removed are being removed due to their location, that any development at the site would likely require removal of the trees.

Lenart summarized the concerns of the Commission.
