Mayor Taylor,

My wife, Renate, and I will be moving to a Seattle, WA suburb later this year. Because of our impending move and all of the associated activities, it makes sense for me to resign effective immediately from the new Sustainability Commission / the old Energy and Environmental Commissions (where I served as liaison from the former to the latter).

It has been a pleasure to serve as a City commissioner since 2016, including as Administrator Lazarus' executive policy advisor of sustainability for three years. Much was accomplished during that period but much remains to be achieved, just like every place else. I'm sure that the City will be well served and well advised by the members of the new commission.

Just as Renate and I were here, we both hope to become active in our new community.
Hopefully we can make a positive difference there, as we attempted to here.

Sincerely,
John Mirsky
