Re: Resolution to Urge City of Ann Arbor Employees' Retirement System to Divest from the Top 200 Publicly-Traded Fossil Fuel Companies
DT: Tuesday, September 3, 2013

We're asking you to support a plan to divest Ann Arbor's holdings from fossil fuels within 5 years, including direct ownership, mutual funds and other retirement accounts that include fossil fuel public equities and corporate bonds.

Divestment from fossil fuel companies is a signal that the people of Ann Arbor are ready to take a stand for the good of the planet. More than 15 other cities have divested, including Madison, WI; Seattle, WA; Berkeley, CA; and State College, PA. A list of commitments from colleges/universities, cities, counties and other institutions is available here: <http://gofossilfree.org/commitments/>

Having passed a relatively robust Climate Action Plan in December 2012, Ann Arbor is preparing to take serious steps to attack climate -- that's why we should make sure we're not also profiting from climate pollution in unintended ways.

We shouldn't be investing their pension funds -- which our tax dollars support - into companies that are wrecking the planet which employees are going to retire on. These companies goals and actions run directly contrary to the City's climate commitments, which City Council has approved. Specifically, we're asking for divestment from the 200 companies that hold the vast majority of the world's coal, oil, and gas reserves. Scientists tell us that 80% of those reserves need to stay in the ground, but these companies continue to recklessly burn through them with no plan to stop.

Divesting from fossil fuels also presents cities, states, and pension funds with an opportunity to reinvest the money in a way that not only creates a profit, but also benefits our communities and the climate. A city could reinvest the money in energy retrofits, solar companies, green jobs programs, and more.

We need to declare our freedom from fossil fuels not only with City Council supported goals, but with actions that support these goals. Divestment is the first step.

Signed,

Erica Ackerman

These major companies are the true culprits of the unacceptable CO2 emissions and the environmental hazards that humans are facing and will face in the future. Supporting them is completely irresponsible, against the best interests of the planet and future, and completely contradicting to the otherwise high sustainability standards that Ann Arbor attempts to uphold. Promoting sustainability while simultaneously supporting the fossil fuel industry with investments is a backwards behavior and totally hypocritical. You are misleading the public until you divest. Please promote true sustainability, which does not include support for fossil fuels.

I live in Ann Arbor's 5th ward. I support this resolution as a necessary step to addressing climate change. We need to call out dirty energy and fuel companies for their practices and unwillingness to transform their business model and work towards a sustainable future. I see no reason moral or financial to participate in oil industry profiteering. Their business model is unsustainable and any investment there will lead to eventual losses... of one kind or another. I hope the council will take the necessary steps to move beyond short term gains and think about the long term health and well-being of the city. Council needs to act in accordance with a positive vision of the future of our town and our world.

Hello, Twelve years ago, when I was living in Berkeley, CA and looking for a place in the Midwest to raise my family, I looked at a huge number of communities. I chose Ann Arbor because it had a reputation for being progressive and having similar values as mine. Now as a new member of the 1st ward, we are about to complete the second Net Zero home in Ann Arbor. This summer Urban Ashes, the social enterprise I founded in Ann Arbor, won Washtenaw Counties "Big Leap" award. I urge my two city council members, Sabra Briere and Sumi Kailasapathy along with all the other council members including our Mayor, John Hieftje, to join me and taking The Big Leap. Those who can lead, must lead! Thank you and enjoy, Paul

Individual lifestyle change is important, but what we really need is large-scale, organized action that targets polluters with economic and political pressure---boycotts, divestment, civil disobedience, and ultimately labor strikes as well. So I applaud those who organized this petition, and hope that this is just a first step!
